Diesel Atmo Et TurboQ: Where to get information about how GTK works? I'm starting to learn GTK and I'm just wondering where to get information about how to program GTK. I know it's pretty simple but what I can't find anywhere is more detailed about the GTK API. For example, I'm trying to understand this sentence: GTK+ event handling classes are composed of a small number of base classes. These base classes have virtual functions whose signatures are part of the event handling machinery. These functions are defined directly in GTK+. All other GTK+ functions are wrappers around these classes. Thus, you can see that the "core" of the GTK+ event handling mechanism consists of a small number of base classes. Is there a book or an API document that I can read? A: In addition to the documentation that already exists: There are several tutorials available as well: And here are some good explanations of events: 3e33713323
