This is a program that is used for.In what comes as a blow to India's space industry, China on Friday launched a robotic rover as part of its second mission to the moon.The Chang'e 4, or Moon Orbiter-Lander-Return Vehicle, was lifted off from the Xichang Satellite Launch Center in southern China's Sichuan province in the early hours on Friday.The robotic rover – named after the mythical celestial deity – is expected to touch down on the lunar surface in December.Chang'e-4 is named after a legendary Chinese moon goddess.An earlier Chang'e-3 mission, mounted atop a Long March-3B carrier rocket, was launched in 2013. It took the rover, which has been crawling around the moon's surface since then, 45 days to complete a 500-kilometre journey.The landing attempt of the Chang'e-4 was called off on Friday due to a technical problem.However, it is expected to be carried out on Saturday, according to Chinese state media.The mission aims to map out the lunar surface for exploration by the Chang'e-5, a lander scheduled for launch next year.Chinese space officials are targeting the moon for mining. Beijing hopes to first develop bases on the lunar surface and exploit its resources, including water, before eventually establishing a permanent presence.“When the entire moon is harnessed, humanity will become a space-faring civilisation, and eventually become a spacefaring nation,” said Chinese President Xi Jinping at the time of the launch of Chang'e-3.The Chang'e-4 is the first mission of the new series to reach the moon since the United States' Apollo program ended.In May 1969, Chinese astronauts walked on the moon and returned
