_PhotoAcute_ and _Layers_ are two excellent tutorials. Both have tutorials with video and text. # Finding Photoshop Tutorials The great thing about using a tutorial is that you find out the steps and techniques you need to get the desired result in a few simple steps instead of using trial and error. There are many Photoshop tutorials available on the Internet. For example, go to www.tutsplus.com and type the word _Photoshop_ into the Search box. There are many links that will lead to Photoshop tutorials. Be advised that most free tutorials are created by students who are learning to work with Photoshop and they are not so professional. The same is true of the paid tutorials. On the other hand, there are also a lot of commercial tutorials that are created by professionals. You can also find tutorials posted on various Photoshop support sites, such as www.nostatic.com and www.smallmac.com. You can search for tutorials by keyword or by the areas of the program you'd like to learn more about. # Partnering with Adobe One of the most convenient ways to learn Adobe Photoshop is to attend a photography workshop or Photoshop class offered by Adobe. This is a great way to learn new techniques and to practice the techniques you've learned. For more information about Adobe workshops, visit www.adobe.com/go/workshops. # Duplicating Layers When you import a photo into Photoshop or an image you've saved from the web, you will have a single layer. When you want to duplicate a layer, you must merge the layer into the background so you can see both layers at the same time. This is especially useful if you need to make changes to a small area on one layer. Using the Merge Down function, you can view the new changes to both layers at the same time. However, sometimes you want two images to have a similar look, and you'll need to duplicate layers so that you can apply the same edits or adjustments to both images. Duplicating is a very important Photoshop tool, so let's take a look at how to duplicate layers. First, let's look at the buttons on the Layers panel. The Layers panel has these options available for duplicating layers: 1. The individual layer areas can be duplicated using the Split Into Layers command in the Layers panel, as shown

Q: Unity unable to get render texture from backend I am trying to render a texture from C# into Unity. This has worked before, but something has changed because now unity can't get the texture from the backend. I am using the same method as before, but now it fails with this error: Error: "System.NullReferenceException: Object reference not set to an instance of an object. at UnityEngine.Rendering.DefaultRenderer.DoRenderStages(RenderContext context, UIElement element, RenderStageDependency dependency) at UnityEngine.Rendering.DefaultRenderer.Render(RenderContext context, UIElement element) at UnityEngine.Rendering.DefaultRenderer.Render(RenderContext context, UIElement element) at Editor.UI.Components.RenderManager.onRenderMarkedForCompute(Boolean forced) in /Users/davidbourque/source/repos/Editor/Editor.UI.Components/RenderManager.cs:line 39 at Editor.UI.Components.Rendering.DefaultRenderManager.onRenderMarkedForCompute(Boolean forced) in /Users/davidbourque/source/repos/Editor/Editor.UI.Components/Rendering/RenderManager.cs:line 86 at Editor.UI.Components.Text.TextRenderer.onRenderMarkedForCompute(Boolean forced) in /Users/davidbourque/source/repos/Editor/Editor.UI.Components/Text/TextRenderer.cs:line 88 at Editor.UI.Components.ComputeManager.onRenderMarkedForCompute(Boolean forced) in /Users/davidbourque/source/repos/Editor/Editor.UI.Components/ComputeManager.cs:line 91" The code looks the same as before, and everything looks fine, because it works. Relaxation and cochlear damage following injection of gadolinium into the cochlea. The aim of this study was to evaluate the effects of intracochlear injection of gadolinium (Gd) on the acoustic and auditory nervous activities. Mice were divided into three groups of 8 mice each. The left cochlea of the first group was injected with a solution of 0.1 M Gd. The left cochlea of the second group was injected with physiological saline. The right cochlea of the first group was injected with 0.1 M Gd. This left-to-right comparison was used to exclude the possibility that auditory nerve activity and membrane potential directly respond to the injection of Gd. The left and right cochleae of the third group were injected with 0.1 M Gd in order to evaluate the auditory brainstem response (ABR) threshold changes. Immediately after the injection, changes in the brainstem response (BSR) and somatic electromyographic (EMG) responses to tone-burst stimulation (TBS) were measured before and after the injection. The BSR was measured as the threshold change in relation to the stimulus intensity. The EMG responses were measured as the threshold change in relation to the stimulus frequency and the duration of the stimulus. After the injection of Gd, the BSR threshold and EMG responses to TBS of the injected side were decreased more in the group with Gd injection than in the saline and control groups. The changes in threshold of the group with intracochlear injection of Gd were insignificant. In the group with intracochlear injection, injected-side TBS evoked EMG responses more in the control group than in the saline group. These results suggest that Gd has more effect on inner hair cells of the cochlea than on the auditory nerve. Thus, it is suggested that Gd can be used to estimate cochlear damage rather than peripheral hearing loss. Opera for Windows Mobile has arrived in the Windows Store.
