online streaming movie downloadQ: understanding ratelimiter in django

I have seen code online similar to this: @classmethod def all(cls, *args, kwargs): user = kwargs.pop('user', current_user) now =

timezone.now() current_rate = limit(cls.all_usage_per_hour, args[:1], user=user) current_rate.amount_remaining_in_hour = args[1] current_rate.add_time_since(now) return current_rate as to come up with a rate limiting logic for django. Can someone explain how I would translate this to django? What would be the meaning of add_time_since and what is the all_usage_per_hour? what is the limit function? A: The code doesn't actually do anything useful; it just creates a RateLimiter object to hold the argument that was passed in. It's not doing anything with that argument, because it does not take it. The all() classmethod is a shortcut for making a helper method that can be used with syntax like: class Foo(models.Model): def get_all_bar(self, *args, kwargs): return limit(Foo.all_bar, self, *args, kwargs) That being said, the code you provided is incredibly inefficient; a simple while loop would be far easier to read and understand: current_rate = limit(Foo.all_usage_per_hour, args[:1], user=user) current_rate.amount_remaining_in_hour = args[1] while current_rate.amount_remaining_in_hour > 0:

    current_rate.add_time_since(timezone.now()) return current_rate // -*-
